Tired Business Man

The business man is tired, with tears his eyes are dim; the rest he's long desired is still sidestepping him. His weariness has grown to be a public wheeze. Grief marks him for its own, and will not give him ease. For all hat-passers beg a chance to run him down, and deftly pull his leg for kopeck, yen and crown. Is there a scheme on deck to paint the railway tracks? The merchant's shapely neck is first to feel the ax. Is there a kindly plan to send the poor some ducks? The weary business man must cough up seven bucks. Is there a project big, to gild the village pump? The business man must dig his savings in a lump. For every cheerful fake devised by Jack or Jill, the business man must take some rubles from his till. The hoboes in the jail must have a Christmas tree; oh, merchant, hand the kale—be generous and free! A widow needs a pup, to keep the tramps away; oh, merchant, loosen up, be liberal today! The Daily Chronicle in an editorial says:

"The Orduna case makes mincemeat of the German official excuses for the sinking of the Lusitania. There is no conceivable explanation of the attack, except that it was deliberately intended to expose her non-combatants and neutral passengers to the fate of those carried by the Lusitania and Falaba."

Most of the morning papers point out that there could be no question of contraband in the case of the Orduna, as she was outward bound.

Bishop Cranston, who is now at his summer home at Ludington, Mich., is seventy-four years old.

Previous to the passage of the rule by the last general convention many bishops served until well in the eightles. Bishop Warren being eighty-four when he retired some years ago.

Bishops heretofore, it is pointed out, have strenuously objected at time to retiring, and the general conference, at its last session, passed the rule fixing seventy-two years as the age limit, so that following it all bishops would be treated alike.

Another contributory factor was the recent establishment of great plants in Russia and France, financed and controlled by American capital, for the manufacture of farming machinery.

Information reaching the Department of Commerce, however, indicates a growing use of machinery on farms both in Europe and elsewhere, a tendency which will doubtless be even more pronounced upon the resumption of peace, since the devastation of war is causing a marked shortage in human and animal labor, necessitating proportionately more machinery for the successful conduct of farming.
